

US Conference of Mayors
6th Annual Climate Protection Awards
Presentation 2012
Transcript

Video opens with Mayor Denny Doyle, City of Beaverton

He mentions how the city talked to about 5000 people in the community over a 2-year period; consistently, there were three things the people wanted, one of which was for the city to be more sustainable and practice green practices. Next step was to start building a team

Video fades to Cindy Tatham, Sustainability Manager, City of Beaverton

She mentions Department of Energy block grant funding made possible the installation of 770 LED and Inductions street lights, as well as stimulus funding leading to the 17.6 kw solar array installed on the roof of City Library. Cindy goes on to discuss partnerships with businesses such as PGE

Video fades to Mark Fryburg, Government Affairs, Portland General Electric

He discusses promoting the use of electric cars and how Beaverton was one of the first communities to install charging stations making it possible, and easy, for customers to own and operate electric vehicles

Video fades to Cindy Tatham

Discusses inception of Solar Beaverton with the city actively promoting solar installations to homeowners

Video fades to Brad Nahill, Solar Beaverton customer

Talks about how Solar Beaverton incentives made it easy and affordable for him to install solar at his house

Video fades to Cindy Tatham

The Solar Beaverton goal was for 220 solar installations, and how the goal was exceed, reaching 258 clients

Video fades to Mayor Doyle

The Mayor talks about the Chevron station being green, carbon neutral

Video fades to Bob Barman, Owner, Chevron Gas Station

He talks about the gas station being the greenest in America, with support from the city of Beaverton and Chevron

- LED lighting
- Biodiesel
- EV charging station
- 185 solar panels

Video fades to Cindy Tatham

Discusses the Beaverton Central Plan and how it serves over 300,000 square feet of heating and cooling services while being 99.8% efficient

Video fades to Mayor Doyle

Thanks the US Conference of Mayors and Walmart for the honor they brought to the city of Beaverton